Kurna miyurna, Kurna yarta, ngadlu tampinhi.
(We recognise Kurna people and their land.)

When the day of Pentecost came, they were all together in one place ...

The disciples were in the one place and they were together. They were scared, unsure of what would happen next. Imagine what it was like for them – the emotional rollercoaster over previous weeks, the excitement of seeing Jesus after his death, trying to understand the world now, and unsure of how they could be his witnesses.

They could've retreated to hiding places on their own. But their leader had told them to stay in Jerusalem and wait for the Holy Spirit. They were afraid and yet waited together. Today we want everything instantly - our computers aren't fast enough and we don't like to wait in line to pay for shopping. I wonder how impatient we would be in this situation? I wonder how impatient the disciples were and how eagerly they waited for something new coming ...

Where are we in this story? Are we together in the one place, waiting to see what God is up to, eagerly awaiting the Holy Spirit to flow in us and through us? Do we desire to be witnesses to Jesus? God has called us to be together as a community and witnesses to the hope of Jesus and transformation in Jesus.
